THE GREEK TESTAMENT

PREFACE.

THIS work is entirely similar in origin, method, and design, to the author's HEBREW DICTIONARY, and may be employed separately, for a corresponding purpose and with a like result, namely, to be serviceable to many who have not the wish or the ability to use a more copious Lexicon of New-Testament Greek. In this case also even scholars will find many suggestions and explanations not unworthy their attention.

MADISON, N. J.

PLAN OF THE BOOK.

1. All the original words are treated in their alphabetical Greek order, and are numbered regularly from the first to the last, each being known throughout by its appropriate number. This renders reference easy without recourse to the Greek characters.

2. Immediately after each word is given its exact equivalent in English letters, according to the system of transliteration laid down in the scheme here following, which is substantially that adopted in the Common English Version, only more consistently and uniformly carried out; so that the word could readily be turned back again into Greek from the form thus given it.

3. Next follows the precise pronunciation, according to the usual English mode of sounding syllables, so plainly indicated that none can fail to apprehend and apply it. The most approved sounds are adopted, as laid down in the annexed scheme of articulation, and in such a way that any good Græcist would immediately recognise the word if so pronounced, notwithstanding the minor variations current among scholars in this respect.

4. Then ensues a tracing of the etymology, radical meaning, and applied significations of the word, justly but tersely analyzed and expressed, with any other important peculiarities in this regard.

5. In the case of proper names, the same method is pursued, and at this point the regular mode of Anglicizing it, after the general style of the Common English Version, is given, and a few words of explanation are added to identify it.

6. Finally (after the punctuation-mark :—) are given all the different renderings of the word in the Authorized English Version, arranged in the alphabetical order of the leading terms, and conveniently condensed according to the explanations given below.

By searching out these various renderings in the MAIN CONCORDANCE, to which this Dictionary is designed as a companion, and noting the passages to which the same number corresponding to that of any given Greek word is attached in the marginal column, the reader, whether acquainted with the original language or not, will obtain a complete Greek Concordance also, expressed in the words of the Common English Version. This is an advantage which no other Concordance or Lexicon affords.

GREEK ARTICULATION.

The following explanations are sufficient to show the mode of writing and pronouncing Greek words in English adopted in this Dictionary.

1. The Alphabet is as follows:

No.	Form.	Name.	Transliteration and Power.
1.	A α	Alpha (al'-fah)	a, as in Arm or
2.	B β	Bēta (bay'-tah)	b [man*]
3.	Γ γ	Gamma (gam'-mah)	g hard †
4.	Δ δ	Dēlta (del'-tah)	d
5.	Ε ε	Ēpsilon (ep'-see-lon)	ē, as in met
6.	Ζ ζ	Zēta (dzay'-tah)	z, as in adze†
7.	Η η	Ēta (ay'-tah)	ē, as in they
8.	Θ θ or Δ	Thēta (thay'-tah)	th, as in thin‡
9.	Ι ι	Iōta (ee-o'-tah)	i, as in ma-
10.	Κ κ or Χ	Kappa (cap'-pah)	k [chine]
11.	Λ λ	Lambda (lamb'-dah)	l
12.	Μ μ	Mu (moo)	m
13.	Ν ν	Nu (noo)	n
14.	Ξ ξ	Xi (ksee)	x = ks
15.	Ο ο	Omikrōn (om'-e-cron)	ō, as in not
16.	Π π	Pi (pee)	p
17.	Ρ ρ	Rhō (hro)	r
18.	Σ σ, final	Sigma (sig'-mah)	s sharp
19.	Τ τ	Tau (tōw)	t †

* α, when final, or before ρ final or followed by any other consonant, is sounded like α in Arm; elsewhere like a in man.

† γ, when followed by γ, κ, χ, or ξ, is sounded like ng in king.

‡ ζ is always sounded like dz.

§ θ never has the guttural sound, like th in thin.

|| ι has the sound of ee when it ends an accented syllable; in other situations a more obscure sound, like i in amiable or imbecile.

† τ never has a sibilant sound, like t in nation, nature.

20.	Υ υ	Upsilon (w'-pee-lon)	u, as in full
21.	Φ φ	Phi (fee)	ph = f
22.	Χ χ	Chi (khee)	German ch *
23.	Ψ ψ	Psi (psee)	ps
24.	Ω ω	Omēga (o'-meg-ah)	ō, as in no.

2. The mark ¨, placed over the initial vowel of a word, is called the Rough Breathing, and is equivalent to the English h, by which we have accordingly represented it. Its absence over an initial vowel is indicated by the mark ¨, called the Smooth Breathing, which is unappreciable or silent, and is therefore not represented in our method of transliteration.†

3. The following are the Greek diphthongs, properly so called :‡

Form.	Transliteration and Power.	Form.	Transliteration and Power.
αι	ai (ah'ee) [ä + ē]	αυ	ow, as in now
ει	ei, as in height	ευ	eu, as in feud
οι	oi, as in oil	ου	ou, as in through.
ωι	we, as in sweet

* From the difficulty of producing the true sound of χ, it is generally sounded like k.

† These signs are placed over the second vowel of a diphthong. The same is true of the accents.

The Rough Breathing always belongs to υ initial.

The Rough Breathing is always used with ρ, when it begins a word. If this letter be doubled in the middle of a word, the first takes the Smooth, and the second the Rough Breathing.

As these signs cannot conveniently be written over the first letter of a word, when a capital, they are in such cases placed before it. This observation applies also to the accents. The aspiration always begins the syllable.

Occasionally, in consequence of a contraction (orasis), the Smooth Breathing is made to stand in the middle of a word, and is then called Coronis.

‡ The above are combinations of two short vowels, and are pronounced like their respective elements, but

4. The accent (stress of voice) falls on the syllable where it is written.* It is of three forms: the acute (´), which is the only true accent; the grave (`), which is its substitute; and the circumflex (¨ or ~), which is the union of the two. The acute may stand on any one of the last three syllables, and in case it occurs on the final syllable, before another word in the same sentence, it is written as a grave. The grave is understood (but never written as such) on every other syllable. The circumflex is written on any syllable (necessarily the last or next to the last one of a word), formed by the contraction of two syllables, of which the first would properly have the acute.

5. The following punctuation-marks are used: the comma (,), the semicolon (;), the colon or period (.), the interrogation-point (?), and by some editors, also the exclamation-point (!), parentheses and quotation-marks.

in more rapid succession than otherwise. Thus αι is midway between ε in high, and ay in say.

Besides these, there are what are called improper diphthongs, in which the former is a long vowel. In these,

ε sounds like e	ηυ sounds like η + υ
η " " η	αυ " " α + υ.
φ " " φ

the second vowel, when υ, is written under the first (unless that be a capital), and is silent; when υ, it is sounded separately. When the initial is a capital, the ε is placed after it, but does not take the breathing nor accent.

The sign ¨, called diacresis, placed over the latter of two vowels, indicates that they do not form a diphthong.

* Every word (except a few monosyllables, called Aton'tes) must have one accent; several small words (called Enclit'ics) throw their accent (always as an acute) on the last syllable of the preceding word (in addition to its own accent, which still has the principal stress), where this is possible.

SIGNS EMPLOYED.

+ (addition) denotes a rendering in the A. V. of one or more Gr. words in connection with the one under consideration.

× (multiplication) denotes a rendering in the A. V. that results from an idiom peculiar to the Gr.

( ) (parenthesis), in the renderings from the A. V., denotes a word or syllable sometimes given in connection with the principal word to which it is annexed.

[ ] (bracket), in the rendering from the A. V., denotes the inclusion of an additional word in the Gr.

Italics, at the end of a rendering from the A. V., denote an explanation of the variations from the usual form.

NOTE.

Owing to changes in the enumeration while in progress, there were no words left for Nos. 2717 and 3203-3302, which were therefore silently dropped out of the vocabulary and references as redundant. This will occasion no practical mistake or inconvenience.
